

Daisy FlexSpace

Re-imagine your work environment

The way we work (and will go to work) has changed. Our journey from the “old” office model to mandatory working from home (WFH), and back again with the partial return of workers to a shared environment, has fundamentally transformed the way we talk, and think, about the workplace.

With the rise of homeworker and smartworker technologies, the “office” (as we once knew it) no longer feels so integral to business productivity and cohesion. Even so, teams will always need to congregate in person from time to time, and parts of your business will always function best in a shared, central workplace.

As we adapt it’s no surprise that more and more businesses are looking at alternative, flexible workplace models.

Key challenges for forward-looking employers

The ability to support home and office working

A reduced financial commitment to “property”

Maximum value for money
